When is infusion therapy prescribed?

Infusion therapy is often used to treat:

- Infections that do not respond to oral treatment.
- Immune disorders.
- Severe dehydration or vomiting.

What is infusion therapy?

Most often, infusion therapy involves putting medicine, fluids or nutrition directly into the bloodstream using an intravenous needle.

Injecting medicine under the skin or close to the spine is also considered infusion therapy.

Where do I go for infusion therapy?

It is not necessary for you to be admitted to the hospital for treatment. Outpatient infusion therapy is available at the Infusion Center of Methodist Physicians Clinic.

Who will oversee my infusion?

Highly experienced nurses will provide your infusion therapy under the guidance of our physicians. Our professional staff is available 24 hours a day to provide answers to your questions or care for any emergencies.

The infusion center is headed by physicians who specialize in infectious diseases. They will evaluate you to create the most effective outpatient treatment plan. Your health care provider will oversee your progress, working closely with our Infusion Center physicians.

Convenience

With outpatient infusion therapy, you can continue most of your regular activities and sleep in your own bed. The Infusion Center is conveniently located at Methodist Physicians Clinic Regency, near 102nd and W. Dodge Road. Our staff will work with your insurance company to ensure prior authorization is obtained.

Do I have a role in my treatment?

Our team of health care professionals will work closely with you and your health care provider to help you achieve the best possible outcomes.

Comfort

In our outpatient setting, you can sit in large comfortable recliners wearing your street clothes to receive treatment. You can read, watch cable TV, or just relax and have a cup of coffee.

Complete Care

Without having to leave your recliner, you can have lab samples drawn; wounds dressed; and follow-up visits with your infectious disease physician.

Committed to Excellence

Methodist Physicians Clinic strives to provide our patients with the best possible experience. From our friendly check-in staff to our experienced nurses and physicians, everyone at the infusion center is committed to your care.
